The 9x9 Mode is for beginning learners. No operand will appear during a test which is over 9. Examples: 2+2 or 6+5 or 3+9. The 20x20 Mode is for more experienced learners. One or both operands can be over 9. Examples: 2+15 or 11+16 or 12+4. The test can be limited to Addition, Subtraction, Multiplication or Division, or the test can be a mixture of questions with adding, subtracting, multiplying or dividing. In 20x20 Mode it is recommended to select only Addition or Subtraction tests. Specify the number of questions in a test and the number of seconds to answer a question.

Your child can click the virtual keypad to enter the answer. Click on the keypad with the mouse or if you have a touch screen monitor, your child can touch the numbers on the keypad. A third option is to use the real keypad on the device keyboard. If the answer is correct, a green checkmark appears. If the answer is incorrect, the software crosses out the incorrect answer and displays the correct answer. Later in the test, the software may repeat a question which had been answered incorrectly.
